

If I'd lost a part of my life,
For every time I've hated
your soul,
I could never count the times that I died,
It seems I died a thousand
deaths ago;
Way back when, you
became my friend,
But we ended up in golden
clouds,
Against a silver sky,
And now I know, it wasn't hate that showed,
Just the pain of having to watch you slowly die,
And now you wonder how I can forget the hurt so fast,
And pretend that there's a future,
where there just exists a past,
Ask someone now, they'll tell it all the same,
Love can stand through anything,
Love... is not a game.
It's written love is patient,
love is kind, kind,
And keeps on loving even
through the hard times,
It's written love keeps no record of the wrongs we've made,
Love is never jealous, never proud,
And not afraid;

Prophecies, are only born to cease,
For the things we never know won't cause us pain,
But when perfection comes,
imperfection disappears,
And the shining truth falls
down on us like rain,
And I was spoken to in the most excellent of ways,
To hear these words of wisdom,
keep this prayer through all my days,
And if you've given all you have,
And live to every law,
And still stand without love,
You never gave at all...
It's written love is patient,
love is kind, kind,
And I'll still stand with love
for you,
and pray with all my mind,
And I'll still love you even
In the dying science of your mind,
Through all the windless
tales,
In the end you'll come to realize,
That love... love never fails...
