Ben Franklin celebrates 100th Anniversary

Bob Zimdar, owner of the Sparta Ben Franklin store, today announced his store will participate in the "parent" company's 100th birthday celebration by offering a year-long series of outstanding Anniversary specials each week during 1977.

The Ben Franklin organization, originally named Butler Brothers, began as a tiny wholesale business in a 16 x 40-ft. building in the city of Boston in 1877. The sign at the entrance read, "Butler Brothers — Specialties in Small Wares."

Because of limited capital and the inability to offer wide merchandise offerings, the Butler brothers conceived the idea of providing a number of specialties at a uniform retail price of five cents each. The success of this initial idea led to offering a selection of merchandise to retail at ten cents each and from this evolved one of America's most famous retail business concepts — the "5-and-10 Cent Store."

From Butler Brothers' humble beginning 100 years ago, the Ben Franklin Division has developed and grown into a nationwide group of nearly 2,100 independently-owned franchised variety stores operating in all 50 states.

In celebrating the company's "Century One" birthday, Mr. Zimdar explains that an outstanding, low-priced merchandise special will be offered each week throughout 1977 as a part of the year long celebration. (Watch the columns of this paper for announcement for these weekly specials.) In addition, a nationwide Anniversary sale is scheduled for late April at which time your local Ben Franklin store will be offering a wide selection of 100 items — each one an exceptional low-priced special.

Mr. Zimdar adds, "The Ben Franklin story fulfills the American dream in which hundreds of independent franchisees, such as myself, own and operate successful businesses serving throughout America in partnership with the Ben Franklin organization."
